COAL.

In time of peace prepare for war. In warm weather prepare for cold. The wise man lays in his supply of coal during the summer months. We have a bounteous supply of SOUTH JELICO and MIXED CANNEL.

SALT.

Just received a car load of FRESH SALT.

FARM WAGONS.

We feel confident we have the best lot of farm wagons made, such as AVERY, STUDEBAKER and MITCHELL. We also keep cheaper grades.

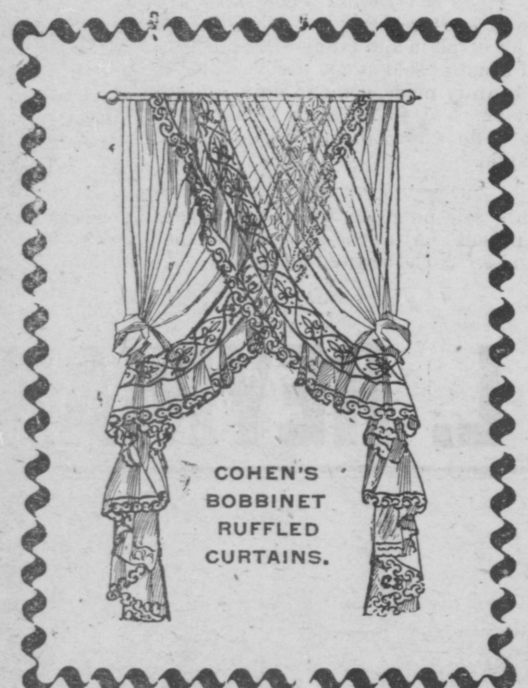

FARM IMPLEMENTS.

We sell the celebrated AVERY DISC PLOW, the very best plow for hard ground. We also sell the most popular plow—THE VULCAN. It has a light draft and does nice work. We are also agents for the HOOSIER DRILLS and keep in stock CORN HARVESTERS. In fact anything the farmer needs we try to have for him. We also have some choice SEED RYE.

J. T. HINTON,

BETRAYAL.

Out of the chilling rain and fog
That hid the mountain from our sight
A dusky cloud came floating down
At early dawn of light.

The cloud dropped softly to the lake
And a sound of whirling wings
And spread into a graceful line
A host of living things.

We hailed this burst of joyous life;
The sunless day seemed dark no more,
When suddenly a shot rang out
And echoed round the shore.

The waterfowl were nature's guests,
But they were doomed, and all that day
The shots pealed forth, and on the waves
The dead and dying lay.

At last into the breeding nest
There vanished, softly as it came,
A broken flock, with plume torn,
After that day of shame.

UNINHABITED ISLANDS.

There Are Thousands of Them in the Indian Ocean.

If you should want an island—that is, an uninhabited island—for the purpose of occupying it alone, Robinson Crusoe-like, or to use it for romantic fiction or for any other purpose, to the exclusion of all others in the world, you need have no trouble in finding one if you see fit to make a journey to the Indian ocean. In the waters between Madagascar and India you can find more than 15,000 of them, where there is not a human being and where you can, if you will, be monarch of all you survey.

An English traveler has recently been among the small islands that dot the western end of the Indian ocean to make an inventory of them and reports that he counted 16,100 and found only about 600 of them inhabited. Now, there is a good chance for any one who may want an island.

These particular islands are not large, as islands go, but very many of them are sufficient for the purpose of a Robinson Crusoe or any other novel hero or for even a small colony of shipwrecked mariners or other persons who might be cast on one of them or seek for the purpose of making a home pretty much out of the busy world.

Some of them are only an acre or two, well elevated above the tide, while others are a quarter of a mile in diameter and running from that up to a mile or two in length and a quarter or less of the length in breadth. Many of them are granitic structures that rise steeply from 20 to 100 feet, well covered with rich soil, through which small fresh water streams hurry to the sea, which they reach after flowing over benches of glistening calcareous sand that are begirt by coral reefs, which form walls about the islands.

How He Saved His Dinner.

In the little town of Arundel there is a taxidermist who is gifted with a wonderful presence of mind. Here is an instance:

Some time ago a gentleman called at his shop with a cock pheasant, which he desired to have skinned, stating at the same time that he did not require the body. This quite suited the taxidermist, who thought the pheasant would do for his dinner on the morrow.

However, later in the day the gentleman called again and said that he would take the body away. The taxidermist replied that it was unusual for customers to take the bodies away, but that he had no objection, and he fetched the bird, which his wife had put on a plate and covered with flour. "Ah!" exclaimed the gentleman. "It looks very nice. But what is this white powder with which it is covered?"

"Oh, that," replied the taxidermist quietly, "is arsenic. I always cover the bodies with that until I can dispose of them."

"Ar-arsenic!" stammered the gentleman. "Why, I thought the bird was dead."

"It would be good to eat. Thank you, I won't trouble to take it away with me. Good day."

The taxidermist had saved his dinner.—London Answers.

Rede Justice.

A certain Arizona Justice of the peace, whose knowledge of the law was never gained from books or actual practice before the bar, was hearing an assault and battery case. The lawyer for the defense was shouting his arguments when the court said:

"That will do. Sit down."

He then adjusted his spectacles and sagely observed:

"Prisoner, stand up! According to the law an ill' evydence an there is no evydence—Of found ye guilty, or, an evydence $50. If ye air guilty, faith, it's a very light sentence, an if ye air not guilty it'll be a mighty good lesson for ye!"—Detroit Free Press.

The Prudent Scotsman.

A cautious Scotsman, 85 years old, had saved enough to purchase a piece of freehold land upon which he had had his eye for some time. He repaired to the freeholder and opened negotiations for the purchase. The freeholder, however, informed him that for some reason or other he could not part with the freehold, but said he would give him a lease for 999 years. This, he was informed, was practically the same thing. "Na, na," said the aged one, shaking his gray head, "time soon runs awa'."—London Outlook.

THE STEEL WORKERS.

Life of the Strikers and Their Families.

WIVES CHEER ON THEIR HUSBANDS

Women the Chief Sufferers, and They Are Most Bitter and Aggressive in Urging the Men to Join the Strike, Says Grace Lucas—Many Men Fishing or Camping.

Popular fancy during strike times pictures the strikers standing around a campfire with a club in hand determined to repel the invasion of new men. The present strike of over 50,000 steel workers of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers presents no such picture. A stranger can walk by any Pittsburgh mill and not see half a dozen strikers, says Grace Lucas in the New York World. Hundreds of them have quit the city and while enjoying themselves in sylvan glades hope the strike will last all summer.

Hundreds of mill men who walked out and will not walk in again were ordered by their officers are enjoying themselves at fishing camps along the Ohio, Monongahela, Youghiogheny and Cheat rivers. Most of them are members of clubs which take a summer outing. Others formed camps where they might be cast on one of them or seek for the purpose of making a home pretty much out of the busy world.

Some of them are only an acre or two, well elevated above the tide, while others are a quarter of a mile in diameter and running from that up to a mile or two in length and a quarter or less of the length in breadth. before I'd want him to do dirty work."

The pretty daughter of a mill worker in one of the iron mills, a brown-eyed girl who is noted as the "belle of Black's alley," sat on the front steps of her home and laid down some stringent laws for the men who make strikes possible.

"It's them as never knows what want is," she said. "They go off on yachts and wear diamonds, but they don't know what it is to stand before a puddin' furnace all the year round and burn the brains out of your head. If they did, maybe they wouldn't be so ready to sit in their offices, with electric fans around them, and make terms which has all the good on one side."

"I've been with Charlie for near two years now, and we was hopin to be married this fall, but I wait forever sooner than let him go scabbin' on blacksheep. If he did that, I'd never look at him again."

All over the streets it was the same. In bright little parlors where the elegance of a piano lamp transformed shabbiness the sentiment was, "Hold strong together," and in the back alleys where the only sunshine is in the faces of little children tattered women voice their willingness to go forth to wash-tub or to beggary ere they will urge their men to give in.

"Workmen is what their wives make them," said Mrs. Mary Leslie, a determined looking woman, who scoured a frying pan while she spoke. "As long as the women don't nag them they'll stand together. I don't know what it's about—something about a pin-cle. I always let him attend to the pin-cle part of the family. I have enough to do to cook the meals and clean the house without meddlin' in what's none of my business, but I say, if he belongs to the union, let him stay out as long as he can, says, and I'll do my part toward keepin' the house together."

Mrs. James, not a young woman, living in Rhey's court, showed a tin box on which the word "Strike" was roughly painted. "Every dime that comes in this house goes in that box," she said, "and has for years. When other men struck and my man wasn't called out, the box was open for them as needed it. Now we'll need it ourselves, but there's enough in here to keep us on bread at least, and I'll rather see the roots of them weeds in the yard there than say a word ag'in' what's for the good of the workin' man."

Little children march around the corners armed with sticks and flags and announce that they are going to guard the mill gates from the black sheep. Strikes are organized on every doorstep and in every back yard, and everywhere enthusiasm is expressed.

When asked how long they could hold out, the almost universal answer was, "Six months." Some said a year, relying on the help from the union, but most of them lean on their own possible resources and labor.

In some of the tin mills, which are a big part of Pittsburgh's industry, there are hundreds of girls employed in the various departments, and in a few of the other mills women work side by side with men. None of these is personally interested in the outcome of the strike, but each and every one believes in it as in her religion and would speak words of inspiration to the flagging ranks of the men when they needed. One buxom maiden called Annie by her companions and whose feather trimmed hat and general Sunday appearance proved her idleness was walking around the scene of her usual employment viewing the closed doors and empty yards with the air of a successful leader of strikes.

"I'd never give in if I was them," she said, shutting her teeth with a snap. "I'd hold out until I was found starved in my tracks rather than come back to work without a hat. I struck. I told the men that, and I'd tell them again if I thought they needed it."

"Ten dollars a week is better than nothin', Annie," said her companion, but Annie's eyes snapped as she replied, "Ten dollars a week wouldn't never pay me for bein' a disgrace to my country by blacksheepin'. It ain't money what's struck us; it's principle, and I say principle every time."

To their principle represents union for the workingman, power in future, prosperity in labor and all conditions of workers transformed and improved. One and all they stand together, ready to work for the bread they afterward bake and ready to starve without bread, if need be, that the strikers have home support to win their cause.

Of the 25,000 or 30,000 strikers fully 2,000 are common laborers, whose earnings are never more than $15.00 per day. They can stand the strike longer than the men who earn $3 per day. The laborers are not members of the Amalgamated association and are not on strike except through sympathy with the union men.

WIDENING RURAL DELIVERY.

Box Feature of the Plan is Proving Quite Popular.

People who live in the country districts of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey and the New England states are just beginning to hear of the new order of the postoffice department at Washington making it part of the duty of the star route mail carriers to deliver mail in boxes put up by patrons along the route.

The first effect is a general protest from the carriers. The box feature is proving quite popular, but every new box which is set up means an extra stop for the carrier and a little longer time on the trip, says the Philadelphia Times. The carriers had ample notice, but they did not figure that their work would be increased materially. Now they think they should be given more time between stations. The department is disposed to be reasonable and will encourage the growth of the box service.

England's Oldest Scientist.

One of the most interesting of our surviving men of science, says the London Daily Telegraph, is James Glaisher, F. R. S., who recently entered upon his ninety-third year. Many people think of the veteran meteorologist only as an astronomer and a fine sample of what a vigorous mind in a sound body can do, hale and hearty at over 92. When he and Coxwell did their seven miles rise into the empyrean and he fainted and the aeronaut only saved both of them by gripping the valve rope with his teeth, his hands being numb and powerless, the world was greatly moved with admiration. At the meeting of the British association the next year, 1863, Professor Owen made a noteworthy statement, "Physiologists," he said, "were all agreed that one condition of longevity was the capacity of the chest, and therefore he hoped the increased breathing capacity acquired by Mr. Glaisher and Mr. Coxwell would tend to the prolongation of their lives." The kindly wish was prophetic. Coxwell died in January, 1899, in his eightieth year. Glaisher still survives and is 92.

Haby's Presumption.

Francis Haby, who became famous through his invention of the fierce upturned muskashoe which Emperor William has for some time affected, is to-day a rich man, for at one time all the young officers of the kingdom with proper pride about them used to rush to his establishment in Berlin to be "waxed up" a "muskashoe." Haby's dismissal from the Kaiser's service is said to have been due to his presumption. Feeling secure in his position, one day he jocularly inquired of his majesty, "Well, what do you think about the Chinese situation?" This was too much for the German Kaiser, and Haby was banished from the court.

relief expedition is under the command of Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic club, who has twice before visited the arctic region.

Lieutenant Peary sailed in 1898 with a five-year leave of absence and a clearly defined plan for finding the north pole. In August, 1900, Mrs. Peary and her daughter sailed from Sidney on the Windward, one of the vessels of a second expedition which expected to find Lieutenant Peary's party. Nothing has been heard of the Windward since she left Sidney.

A Kind Hearted Woman.

Among the interesting personalities of Paris is the Baroness d'Harpen. Her hobby is devotion to homeless animals. She keeps a small corps of bicyclists constantly in search of "waifs and strays," and all so found, whether cats, dogs or other animals, are taken to enjoy her hospitality. Even the dead of their kind are not neglected. When her hired houndmen see a dead animal by the roadside or gutter, they do not throw it into the Seine or the garbage barrel, but take it to a quiet cemetery at Neuilly, where it is buried.

Kentucky Press Association.

The thirty-second annual meeting of the Kentucky Press Association began yesterday afternoon at Madisonville.

The business sessions of the meeting were held last night and to-day, after which the annual joint of the editors will begin.

Madisonville, one of the most beautiful little cities in the State, made great preparations to entertain her visitors and every one in attendance had a rousing good time.

The trip this year will be through the West and through the courtesy of the railroad, Secretary R. E. Morningstar has been enabled to arrange a delightful itinerary. The biggest party that ever left on one of the Kentucky editors' annual outings will go this year. A large number of ladies will accompany their husbands, and socially no outing could be more enjoyable.

An Incorrect Article.

The Lexington Herald of Wednesday contained a column article relating to the Paris Telephone Company and its manager, Mr. Rice, in which there appeared several misstatements. The News interviewed Mr. Rice on the subject, and he seemed more amused than indignant. He said he could not imagine why the author of the article should have written such glaring misstatements unless it was that he had been "seen" by a representative of some other company who was endeavoring to secure an entrance into Paris. Contrary to the aforesaid article, the company represented by Mr. Rice has an exchange, has two operators, day and night, has all necessary poles, wires, linemen, etc., has subscribers, and is hustling for more.

Mr. Rice says he is here for business and is anxious to get all the subscribers he can.

James B. Haggin, owner of Elmdorf, and multi-millionaire, is now the owner of 4,500 acres of fine blue-grass land, and owning such a vast estate, is the largest land owner in the blue-grass, or, for that matter, in the Commonwealth. Wednesday he closed a deal for the purchase of the R. B. Early farm of 500 acres, adjoining Elmdorf. He paid $38,000 for this fine farm, which in the future will be a part of Elmdorf. With the acquisition of this farm Mr. Haggin brings his total up to virtually 5,000, all of which represents an investment of two or three hundred thousand.

The Cynthia Fair.

Oh, For a Sight Of It.

The British ship Durbridge, which arrived at New York from London in ballast to the Standard Oil Company, passed off the Easterly edge of the Banks on July 11 an iceberg 300 feet high and half a mile long, the biggest seen this season by an Atlantic-crosser.

Don't miss it. Heyman's special bargain sale on Thursday, August 8th. Read advertisement.

Card From Mr. Connelly.

Contrary to a report I wish my friends and customers to know that I will continue to run my plumbing shop in this city, and will in the future as in the past employ none but competent workmen, and will be ready at all times to do first-class work at reasonable prices. I still solicit the patronage of the people of Paris and Bourbon county.

J. J. CONNELLY.

One of Herrmann's Jokes.

The Great Herrmann, the prince of magicians, had considerable fun with a street car conductor in St. Louis, Mo., recently. Herrmann was on a downtown Washington Avenue car, the conductor came through collecting fares and Herrmann had in his hand to give him a ten dollar gold piece. The conductor glanced at the coin and said: "I can't change that. Is that the smallest you have?" "You can't change that," said Herrmann, and in his hand was a fifty cent piece. The conductor glanced suspiciously at him, reached out, taking the coin, when to his surprise it was again a ten dollar gold piece. "Did I not tell you," he said savagely handing the coin back to Herrmann, "I could not change it. You will have to give me something smaller, or else get off the car. The company does not make change for anything over two dollars."

"Well, you will have to change this, then," said Herrmann, and there in his hand was the fifty cent piece. "Say, what is this guy?" said the conductor; "have I got them?" "I don't know," said Herrmann, "whether you have or not, but if you don't change this coin and stop annoying me, I shall report you to the company." "Well, I'll be damned," said the conductor, as he rang up several fares by mistake, and the crowd, who had recognized Herrmann, roared with laughter.

Herrmann will open the season of 1901-1902 at the Grand in this city on August 23, and his engagement will undoubtedly be a big success, as it is being looked forward to with a great deal of interest.

Confederate Notes.

The Confederates of Bourbon county are requested to meet at the court house county court day at 2 p. m. to make arrangements for attending the Elks' Fair at Lexington.

A. T. FORTYTH.

The famous Orphan Brigade will hold its annual reunion at Louisville some time in September.

The entire Confederate armies, 1861-5, were not two-thirds as large in number as the present pension roll.

E. J. McKIMMY & SON have just finished a very handsome delivery wagon for our popular grocer, A. J. Fee.

OBITUARY.

George H. Yenowine, one of the best known newspaper men in the West and formerly connected with the Louisville Courier-Journal, died suddenly this week in Milwaukee.

Mr. Thomas Eades, a well known contracting plasterer of Lexington, died suddenly in that city Wednesday of rheumatism of the heart. He was seventy years of age, but active, energetic and preserving. Mr. Eades was born and reared in this city, but moved to Lexington several years since, where he has since resided, being regarded as one of the city's most enterprising citizens. He leaves a widow and two children—a son Asa Eades, of Versailles, and a daughter, Sallie Perkins. Mr. Eades was a brother of Mrs. B. E. Knapp and Mrs. Mary Abbott, of this city. While a resident of this city he did the plastering on several of our oldest buildings, among them being the furniture house of Mr. George W. Davis. The interment will take place in the Paris cemetery, where his parents are buried in the family lot.

The remains will arrive this afternoon at 3:15; services at the grave.

"Fighting Joe" Is Coming.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler, of the United States Army, the famous Confederate leader and cavalry officer, known the world over as "Fighting Joe Wheeler," will be at the Lexington Elks' Horse Show, Fair and Carnival.

Secretary E. W. Shanklin, of the fair association, sent an invitation to Gen. Wheeler by letter, and received a telegram from him at Newport, R. I., accepting the same.

Gen. Wheeler will prove a great drawing card for the fair, as hundreds of his comrades and admirers throughout the State and outside the Commonwealth will flock there to meet him.

The date for "Wheeler Day" is now under consideration and the Elks are awaiting the General's decision.

GEORGE W. BARNEY, Div. Pass Agent, Lexington, Ky.

MR. POLSBORE, representing the Fire Extinguisher and Manufacturing Co., of Chicago, has been in the city for the past few days endeavoring to sell the City Council a new ladder wagon for the fire department. It is something badly needed by the department, and would place our company on a par with any in the State outside of Louisville.

COMMUNION services will be held Sunday morning at the First Presbyterian Church, and preparatory services on Saturday morning.

A CONDUCTOR who runs into Fulton, Ky., recently collected on his train a ticket from Cincinnati to Fulton which had been sold on December 21, 1892. The old man who presented it for passage said that just after he bought it he had heard of a wreck on the road, and was afraid to get on the train. He never summoned up courage enough to use the ticket until last week.

BIGGEST bargain event Paris ever had on Thursday, August 8th, at Heyman's.

Free From Dust.

Last night while several young men were up the creek bathing, Dunan Taylor, who was unable to swim, and had hold of the side of the boat, lost his hold and sank. He had went down the second time when Ben Downey went to his assistance. Taylor grabbed Ben and the two were in danger of drowning when Bob Tucker and John James pulled them out. Mr. Taylor was more scared than hurt and swears in the future he will stick to the bath tub, and a very shallow one at that.
